How the Milk of Human Kindness Flows in Pennsylvania.

Speaking of good neighborhood and kind heartedness, an example is afforded at Reading, Pa, that helps man to think well of his kind.

A farmer, Washington Sand, had a large field of corn that needed cutting. He was ill and help was scarce. He left his sickbed Friday and cut a fewshocks of corn. Neighbors saw him at work and knew he ought to be in bed. At night, which the fullmoon made almost day, Mr Sand's neighbors went into his cornfield, and before they left they had cut and shocked his crop. When the sick farmer went out to resume his labors the next morning it would have been difficult to convince bim that the days of niracles have passed.
